

Some believe that measures against climate change, such as burning oil, gas and coal, should have priority even if that means the economy and jobs suffer. Others believe that the economy and jobs should have priority even if that means more climate change. What is your opinion?

